FEMALE MARINES CONDUCT FIRST AFHGAN MISSION

Marine Corps News

FARAH PROVINCE, Afghanistan--Marines of the 3rd Battalion, 8th Marine Regiment--the ground combat element of Special Purpose Marine Air Ground Task Force Afghanistan--now have a special group of people to help them complete their mission in Afghanistan.

The task force's all-female Marine team is interacting with the Afghan female population in southern Afghanistan -- a task considered culturally unacceptable for the male Marines operating there.

A similar program has been used in combat operations in Iraq, but this is the first time Marine forces in Afghanistan have employed the concept, officials said.

Marine Capt. Mike Hoffman, Commanding Officer of 3/8's Company I, said the all-female team is an important asset for his Marines.

"[The team] provides us access to half of the population that we normally do not have access to," Hoffman said. "They did extremely well interacting with the female villagers."

2ndLt. Johanna Shaffer, the team leader, said their first mission, a cordon-and-search operation in support of Operation Pathfinder, was very successful.

"We were accepted by both the men and women villagers and were able to obtain valuable information about the way they lived and what they thought about the Marine Corps operating in the area," Shaffer said.

During the mission, the female Marines donned brightly colored head and neck scarves as a sign of cultural respect to the Afghan women.

"The scarves showed the Afghan women that we were women too, and we respect their culture," Shaffer said.

Caring for Veterans is Matter of Honor, President Says

by Jim Garamone

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON--Caring for veterans is a responsibility and duty for all Americans, and the employees at the Department of Veterans Affairs are those who are charged with repaying "that debt of honor," President Barack Obama said during a ceremony here marking the Department's 20th anniversary today.

The President promised the VA employees that he will make good on his promise to create a 21st-century department.

VA, formerly called the Veterans Administration, became a cabinet-level department in 1989. The employees are charged with providing education, training benefits, health care, home loans and cemeteries for American veterans. "It's a commitment that lasts from the day our veterans retire that uniform to the day that they are put to rest, and it continues on for their families," the President said.

U.S. servicemembers are the country's best and brightest, Obama said... "They are our bravest, enlisting in a time of war, enduring tour after tour of duty, serving with honor under the most difficult circumstances and making sacrifices that many of us cannot begin to imagine," he said. The department must take care of these people and of their families, he added.

The VA mission always is vital, Obama said, but it is even more so during long and difficult conflicts like today's. "Last month, I announced my strategy for ending the war in Iraq, and I made it very clear that this strategy would not end with the military plans and diplomatic agendas, but would endure through my commitment to upholding our sacred trust with every man and woman who has served this country," the President said. "And the same holds true for our troops serving in Afghanistan."

The President has requested an extra $25 billion for the Department over the next five years. The agency -- under the leadership of retired Army Gen. Eric K. Shinseki, former Army chief of staff -- is reviewing its operations.

"With this budget, we don't just fully fund our VA health care program," the president said. "We expand it to serve an additional 500,000 veterans by 2013, to provide better health care in more places and to dramatically improve services related to mental health and injuries like post-traumatic stress disorder and traumatic brain injury."

COMMANDANT'S COLUMN

Marines,

As I begin another term as your Detachment Commandant, I'd like to thank those Marines whom again stepped up to represent their Detachment. Our slate of officers remains the same except for Senior Vice Commandant and Judge Advocate. Our new Judge Advocate is Bill Mickelson and Jim McComb is the new Senior Vice Commandant--these Marines will be switching offices. I'd like to personally thank all of these Marines for their dedication and the support they have shown for the Central Bucks Detachment and I'd like to especially thank Junior Past Commandant Bill Miller and Adjutant/Paymaster Don Gee for the support they have give me and the Detachment this past year.

sylvania Pack MODD Dog Robber (Paymaster) and Webmaster.

I learned much more about the Marine Corps League and got to meet many Leaguers at the Department and National levels. This helped reinforce my understanding how important we at the Detachment level are to the overall Marine Corps League success and as we go, so does the Department and National.

This past year was busy for the Detachment as we participated in many different functions throughout the year such as Color Guards, fund raising, scholarship ticket sales, highway cleanups, and parades.

The one place I hope we can improve on this year is in recruitment.

In order for the Detachment to thrive, we must constantly increase our membership. I would like to challenge everyone to recruit at least one new member in the coming year and to participate in as many of the Detachment functions as possible.

As for myself, this past year I attended the Department of Pennsylvania Convention and the Quarterly meetings, my Military Order of Devil Dogs (MODD) "Growls" at the Chester County Detachment home, the National Northeast Division Conference, and the National Convention in Orlando, FL.

I served as Department of Pennsylvania Assistant Southeast District Vice Commandant, and Penn-

There are plenty of upcoming events that we will need help with. A-Day is just around the corner on April 25-26. Chaplain Budd Pearce heads up this committee so, if anyone can help, please contact Budd.

The Youth Scholarship Raffle tickets are still available. If you need more please contact Junior Vice Commandant Ben Jones. Remember, the Detachment gets a percentage for every ticket sold.

Once again we will be doing our Memorial Day weekend fundraiser at the State Store in Doylestown (Croos Keys) followed by our participation in the parade. If you can volunteer for any of these activities, please contact Budd or me.

Again, thank you and congratulations to our new slate of Detachment Officers.

HONOR

Obama said technology also will help to cut red tape and ease the transition from active duty... He promised new help for homeless veterans, "because those heroes have a home."

"It's the country they served -- the United States of America," he said. "And until we reach a day when not a single veteran sleeps on our nation's streets, our work remains unfinished."

He called on VA employees to help to implement the GI Bill for the 21st century.

Just as the veterans of World War II formed the backbone of the progress after that war, the veterans of Iraq and Afghanistan too, can be the catalyst for progress.

The deadline for putting the rules for the new GI Bill in place is Aug. 1.

"That's how we'll show our servicemen and women that when you come home to America, America will be here for you," Obama said. "That's how we will ensure that those who have borne the battle, and their families, will have every chance to live out their dreams."

Transforming the agency is a tall order, Obama said, but he added that he has the fullest confidence that the men and women of the department can do it.

The United States will "fulfill our sacred trust and serve our returning heroes as well as they've served us," he said.

VA Budget Adds Mental Health Services for Returning Combat Vets

by Donna Miles

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON--The proposed Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) funding request will provide more post-traumatic stress disorder and traumatic brain injury services to combat veterans, as well as other mental-health care and services for wounded warriors, President Barack Obama said last week.

"The nightmares of war don't always end when our loved ones return home," Obama said.

"Untold thousands of servicemen and -women returning from Iraq and Afghanistan suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder or other serious psychological injury."

The President called the growing incidence of suicide among active-duty servicemembers and returning combat veterans "disturbing."

"Sometimes the deadliest wounds are the ones you cannot see, and we cannot afford to let the unseen wounds go untreated," he said. "And that's why this budget dramatically increases funding for mental-health screening and treatment at all levels."

The proposed budget represents the largest single-year increase in VA funding in three decades.

"All told, we will increase funding by $25 billion over the next five years," the President said.

Obama recognized that thousands of Iraq and Afghanistan veterans have suffered from traumatic brain injury, and said the budget will provide improved services for these cognitive injuries.

"Many with TBI have never been evaluated by a physician," he said. "And because such injuries can often have long-term impacts that only show up down the road, this funding will help ensure they received the ongoing care they need."

The budget proposal also will increase the number of Vet Centers and mobile health clinics, expanding access to mental-health care in rural areas, he said. Meanwhile, it also aims to reduce the stigma of seeking care by adding mental-health professionals to educate veterans and their families about their injuries and their options.

In addition to more comprehensive mental-health services, Obama said the funding request will provide other improvements in the medical care and other benefits veterans receive.

"This budget doesn't just signify increased funding for the VA health-care program," he said. "It significantly expands coverage so that 500,000 more veterans who have previously been denied it will receive it, and it strengthens care and services across a broad range of areas."

The proposed budget also will:

- Invest in better technology to deliver services and benefits to veterans with the quality and efficiency they deserve;
- Provide greater benefits to veterans who are medically retired from service;
- Combat homelessness by safeguarding vulnerable veterans; and
- Ensure the timely adoption of new, comprehensive education benefits that veterans earn through their military service.

Obama said all Americans "share the shame of 154,000 veterans going homeless on any given night."

His budget request will fund a pilot program for not-for-profit groups to ensure that veterans at risk of losing their homes have a roof over their heads. "And we will not rest until we reach a day when not one single veteran falls into homelessness," he said.

Obama also expressed optimism over Senate support for a measure that would provide advanced medical-care funding for veterans.

"The care that our veterans receive should never be hindered by budget delays," Obama said, adding that the plan he and VA Secretary Eric K. Shinseki have advanced will ensure there's no disruption.

"What that means is a timely and predictable flow of funding from year to year, but more importantly, that means better care for our veterans," he said.

MISSION

"They automatically felt more comfortable with us.

"They showed us their homes, and even though they didn't have much, they were still very generous to us. They accepted us as sisters, and we're glad that we were here to help them."

Although Afghan women tend to be more reserved than Afghan men, they still have a large influence on their children, Shaffer said, so engaging with them is important.

"If the women know we are here to help them, they will likely pass that on to their children," she said. "If the children have a positive perspective of alliance forces, they will be less likely to join insurgent groups or participate in insurgent activities."

Hoffman said the female Marines also were accepted by the village men.

"They were not opposed by the villagers," Hoffman said.

"They had no problem allowing [the team] the chance to interact with their women."

The concept employed by her team varies greatly from the program in Iraq because of differences in Afghan culture, Shaffer said.

"The cultural background here is completely different than that of Iraq," Shaffer said.

"Women here are more timid than in Iraq. There is less of a chance that an Afghan woman would try to harm us, because they understand that we are here to help them.

"We also do not know much about the daily life of Afghan women," she continued.

"This provides us not only the opportunity to learn about the women, but also to build and maintain faith and trust of the Afghan women."
